

Bachelor thesis "Censorship in today's internet media" deals with various forms of censorship of internet media nationwide and worldwide. It is analyzing the mechanisms in non-democratic countries which restrict freedom of expression and reception of information communication and even what purport is filtered in countries which respect human rights. This thesis summarizes the options which may defend internet censorship and analyzes the current situation of spreading illegal software and multimedia. It seeks the existing trends in the area of internet communication with notions such as anonymity and free discussion. And therefore it contemplates the relations between censorship, human rights and political situation in the world.